THE INSANE ASYLUM

Resumption of Testimony by the Special Committee.

DR. WHITE ON THE STAND

Superintendent of the Institution Explains at Length.

QUESTIONED IN GREAT DETAIL

Concerning the Administration of Affairs at St. Elizabeth-Will Con-. tinue This Afternon.

Dr. White, superintendent of the Govern ment Hospital for the Insane, was the chief witness before the Olcott special committee today. He was questioned in great detail concerning the administration of affairs at the hospital and had hardly made a beginning of his testimony when the committee adjourned to meet at three o'clock this afternoon

The Morgue Master.

William Schoenberg, morgue master of the District, was the first witness. He assisted the deputy coroner in performing autopsies. At one time the Government Hospital for the Insane had furnished bodies for dissecting purposes in the various colleges in the city, but had not received any for the past three years. The anatomical board had not pressed the hospital authorities for bodies, as the latter were usually so much disfigured from the autopsy at the hospital as to be practically useless subjects for students to dissect. Mr. Schoenberg thought it was the duty of the asylum authorities to notify the anatomical board when there were bodies on hand. He thought the asylum had the right to "post mortem" bodies when the cause of death was not known, but not to dissect them. This was true of all the hospitals in the District.

Dr. White on the Stand.

Dr. White, superintendent of the Government Asylum for the Insane, then took the stand. He testified that he was thirty-six years old: had studied at the Long Island Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y.; had been ambulance and house surgeon of the Eastern District Hospital; medical official on Blackwell's Island; back to the Long Island Hospital, and then to the Binghamton (N. Y.) Asylum as assistant physician. He remained there eleven years, being promoted to the position of first assistant physician, and then came to Washington as superintendent of St. Elizabeth. The Binghamton institution had 1,500 patients. Dr. White then gave, at the request of Chairman Olcott, a resume of his duties as superintendent.

"I am responsible for everything," said Dr. White. He added that he not only had charge of the care of the insane, but of the buildings and grounds. He was disbursing officer of the institution and special disbursing officer of the Department of Justice.

The Medical Staff.

The medical staff was secured by the aid of the civil service commission by competitive examination for the position of medical in applicants. Then he selects a name from the first three on the eligible list. If the first three did not suit, Dr. White said, he could ask the commission for three more could ask the commission for three more linear three did not suit. The honors were about equally shared between Tom Greene as Manrico and Irving Myers of New York as the Count di Luna. Mr. Greene narrowly escaped incould ask the commission for three more names. But his reasons must be satisfactory to the commission. If not he should be forced to take one of the first three names certified to him. There were now ten physicians besides himself on the medical staff. But four or five more were necessary. There were no restrictions on the number of medical officers. The appropriation for the asylum was given to him in a lump sum and, with the approval of the staff, he could spend it as he chose.

The Salaries.

Dr. White received $4,000, this being fixed by statute. The superintendent had himself fixed the salaries of the rest of the staff. clinical director received $2,000 the first assistant physician $2,500, the second assistants, $1,500 to $2,000; assistants, $1,200 to $1,500; junior assistants, $900 to $1,200; medical interne, $600. All of the medical staff were entitled to maintenance at the hospital. There was no law on this subject, but, according to custom, it was conceded that "the medical officers and their families were entitled to maintenance at the institution." This was the custom all over the country.

"Suppose a man has a big family," sug-gested Representative Hay, "isn't it an in-justice to men with no families at all to bore these by families supported at the institution?

"Well," replied Dr. White, "It means, of course, that the man with a big family in effect gets a larger salary than the man with no family at all." In a good many institutions the physicians had "staff hours." At the government asylum the medical officers lived in one of the buildings.

Dr. White told the committee that there were approximately 300 employes at the institution in charge of the insane—about 260 men and forty women. These employes entered as probationers and graduated at the end of six months to the regular schedule. on a graduated scale of pay. They could take a two-year course or graduate with the title of "nurse" at the minimum of the $40 a year, and $10 a head a month was a fair figure for maintenance. It was necessary to have a majority of the attendants live in the institution. When nurses were needed in an emergency they were needed There were about 400 employes outside of those having care of patients.

Modernized. It is rumored along the river front that the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Company is negotiating for the purchase of the old summer resort at Piney Point, Md., and if the deal is consummated it is said the company will convert the place into a modern and up-to-date resort, and will make it the terminus of the excursion route of the new fireproof steamer Jamestown, which the company is building at Newport News, and which will be in service on the river some time in the latter part of the coming month.

Piney Point is within ten miles of Chesapeake bay, and is admirably located. The beach is of hard sand and is a fine one for bathing. Some of the best crabbing and fishing to be found on the Potomac can be had at Piney Point, and not many years and it was a favority resert for the years ago it was a favorite resort for the people of this city, and daily excursions were run by the old Inland and Seaboard Coasting Company steamers during the summer months.

The old two-story frame structure adiacent to the Aqueduct bridge and the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, which was recently condemned by the District building in spector, is being torn down and removed The building, which was for several years used as an office by the Borden Mining Company, was reported a short time ago by the authorities as not only being dangerous, but also a menace to the bridge in case of fire. It has since been a subject of contention between its owner, Mr. C. M. Campbell, and the office of the District building inspector. The controversy was recently closed by the compliance of Mr. Campbell with the terms of a communica-tion from the building inspector, which stated:

"Replying to your communication of May 1, 1906, relative to the condemned frame building on the towpath near the Aqueduct bridge. I have to say that the buildng is in a dangerous condition, situated as it is, on the embankment overhanging K street, and requires immediate attention.

It is a bill covering the entire latitude of her art between the apposite roles of two male and two female portrayals. She will enact great heroes and great heroines. This one-night return to Washington in a composite bill has been made possible by the loss of time in San Francisco. Only a half dozen cities are to be favored. Madame Bernhardt, while en route on her special train from the Pacific slope, made this statement regarding her last appear-

Muddy Water Prevents Bass Fishing. Many anglers who visited the river yesterday with hope of good sport at bass fishing were disappointed to find that the season had been ushered in with a big run of mud from the upper tributaries of the Potomac, which imparted to the water a color of yellow ochre. The law prohibits the taking of bass from the waters of the District between the first day of April and the 30th day of May, and Decoration day is looked forward to by many lovers of the sport with considerable interest, it being the opening day of the bass season.

The fact that the water was clear the 20th caused many anglers to prepare their tackle for a day's sport. Upon taking a view of the amber-colored water the conclusion was arrived at that the best fishing to be had around Washington was to be found at the fish wharf or the markets, and that good old hard coin of United States was the only balt which would land any sort of a fish. son had been ushered in with a big run of

LECTURES TO PUPILS.

Mr. Arthur C. Moses Discusses Antique Furniture.

Mr. Arthur C. Moses of Washington gave an illustrated lecture to the pupils and faculty of the National Cathedral School and a company of invited guests Thursday evening, May 24. Mr. Moses gave special significance to the fact that furniture, as well as art, is changed by a country's political and social conditions. The improvement of furniture was especially noted in several countries during the Renaissance and Gothic periods. The Renaissance led up to the productions of Boulle, Chip-pendale, Sheraton and Hoppelwhite. Furniture sank again into the highly ornate during the Louis XIV and Louis XV periods, and went to such lengths that a reform had to be instituted, as in everything else—manners, morals, etc. Thus we find that the pre-Raphaelites, Burn-Jones and Rosetti, brought valuable aid to William Morris to be a reformed to the state of the liam Morris in his reform, which was felt decidedly in all things artistic as well as useful. Mr. Moses gave special stress to the colonial furniture, which is distinctly our co-lonial. He has a valuable collection of slides. some made from drawings of art-Interspersed were many pictures illustrating the subject collected by Mr Moses in numerous trips around the world. Notable among these was a house of a Chinese dignitary who had in the midst of his palatial furnishings of teakwood and carvings, which were priceless, a highly appreciated American body Brussels car-"Splendid imitations of all of this good work." Mr. Moses stated, "are really bet-ter for us to emulate than poor, but orig-inal designs, and there is very great difficulty in verifying the genuine antique."
